We understand that circumstances can change and you may need to take a break from your studies or leave your postgraduate Master's course.

Taking a break or withdrawing from your studies can affect your student finance, so it's important you let us know straight away.

What happens if I take a break from my course?

If you take a break from your course your Postgraduate Master's Loan payments will stop. If you get a payment after this, you may be asked to repay it straight away, so it's important you let us know as soon as you take a break.

As long as your university has agreed that you can take a break from your studies, your Postgraduate Master's Loan payments will start again when you return to your course. However, if you take a break for two years or more during your course you'll only get further Postgraduate Master's Loan payments if you can show you have compelling personal reasons.

What happens if I withdraw from my course?

If you withdraw from your course your Postgraduate Master's Loan payments will stop. If you get a payment after this you may be asked to repay it straight away, so it's important you let us know as soon as you withdraw from your course.

If you have compelling personal reasons for leaving your course you may be able to get another Postgraduate Master's Loan for a new course. You can only get this once.

What happens if I repeat a year?

You can't get funding to repeat a year, or part of a year, of your course – even if you haven't had all your Postgraduate Master's Loan payments or you chose not to take the maximum amount of loan available to you.

Claiming benefits

If you take a break or withdraw from your course you may be able to claim benefits in certain circumstances, for example, if you become ill or take on caring responsibilities.

You should contact your local Jobcentre Plus for advice. You can also visit www.gov.uk to find out about any benefits you might be able to get.

Repaying your Postgraduate Master's Loan

If you've been overpaid as a result of taking a break or withdrawing from your course we'll contact you to let you know how to repay the amount you've been overpaid or reduce any further student finance you're entitled to. You should let us know as soon as you decide to take a break or withdraw from your course to reduce your chance of being overpaid.

If you haven't been overpaid, you'll repay your Postgraduate Master's Loan as normal. You can find out more about repaying your Postgraduate Master's Loan at www.studentfinancewales.co.uk
